

READ DARKY STORIES TO SOCIETY IN ENGLAND.

Mrs. Gielon, of Alabama,
Captivated Folk on the Other Side.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Gielon is said to be the most captivating teller of darky stories in the country.

She is a native of Alabama. When she was in London she was invited by Lady Northcote to read at Stafford House. Also by Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain and Mrs. Joseph Choate. She recited at the "Woman Writers" dinner before Lady Aberdeen and two hundred authors. At the Southern Evening to be given by the Daughters of the Confederacy on Gen. Lee's birthday, Mrs. Gielon will read and recite.

OVATION TO QUAY IN THE SENATE.

Chamber Thronged with Notables to See Him
Take the Oath.

(Special to The Evening World.)
The INGTON, Jan. 17.—The greatest going play ever seen in the Senate gallery was ready for Senator Quay's coming in at noon today to be sworn in as Senator. The flowers covering the desks, the chief feature being a display of white carnations with a few of red carnations and the legend of the "People's Choice."

There were genuine baskets of roses, carnations and orchids, the display resembling the show window of a fashionable florist on Broadway.

Galleries were packed with spectators. The first Senator in was Pennsylvania's colleague, who was lustily applauded.

Mr. Quay and his daughters had been in the Executive Gallery. Pennsylvania had come from all parts of the State to see their leader take the oath of office, and the entire Pennsylvania delegation from the House was in the Senate.

At 12 o'clock Quay came into the Senate Chamber and there was tremendous cheering from the galleries. The first men to shake hands with him were Senator Nelson, Senators Hanna and Burrows, who kept him out of the Senate before he was sworn in. He shook hands with all and congratulated him. The Senate was called to order at noon.

Quay was entirely hidden behind the great mass of flowers while the chaplain was praying.

A hundred members of the House came in. Senator Penrose then presented the credentials of Quay, and they were read. After President Fry had warned the galleries not to applaud, Senator Quay sat in Chandler's seat in the front row. Senator Penrose escorted him to the top of the Senate and he took the oath. There was an attempt at applause, but it was quickly checked, and the Senate went on with its regular business.

PASSING OF A "SQUARE SPORT"

Will Riley, of "Gamblers' Alley," Ill in San Francisco.

Will Riley, known in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and other cities wherever there is sporting life, is making a fight for his life in San Francisco, where he has been ill for weeks.

Riley's pool-room and, afterward auction-house, was known to every sporting man who went to Chicago as far back as the '70s. But in 1890, and for a few years later, he was at the top pinnacle of his success in Chicago.

More money was wagered in Riley's Gamblers' Alley pool-room in Chicago on elections, races, baseball and billiards than any other five similar resorts in this country, and his place was crowded all day and until midnight.

Many people who never gambled visited Riley's place to hear him talk and to admire his fine face and correct dress. In his business he never hesitated for a word, and his voice was modulated to a degree that would have conformed to the strictest requirements of the best society.

When he took the stand to sell he would begin in some such way as this: "Come on, boys, we can't afford to waste any time, you know. You think that you can pick the winners, and I don't. That is all the difference there is between us. I'll sell 'em any way that you want 'em. Horse against horse, top against bottom or any other way. Now, come on and be lively about it."

He ended himself upon being a "gentleman gambler," which meant, in his creed, that he never did a dishonorable trick.

COMMUTERS' CLOSE SHAVE.

New York Train Nearly Wrecked on the Jersey Central.

Two hundred commuters on their way to New York this morning on a Jersey Central train got a severe fright at Westfield at 7 o'clock. After leaving the Westfield depot, when the speed was rapidly increasing, an axle supporting the drivers snapped.

The drivers crashed into the boilers, and the cars were brought to a sudden stop, jarring the passengers badly. The accident blocked the eastbound passenger track for over an hour and delayed all the suburban trains. If the axle had snapped two minutes later, when the train was under full headway, there would have been a disastrous wreck.

MEDAL FOR BRAVE STUDENT

Yale Senior Risked His Life to Nurse Smalls' Patient.
NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 17.—Samuel Guernsey, a senior at Yale Medical School, is likely to receive a gold medal from the Connecticut Humane Society for bravery in risking his life to nurse C. P. Cook, of Derby, Conn., a smallpox patient. When no other nurse would touch the case Guernsey volunteered. The matter has been laid before Gov. McLean, who has written Guernsey a letter of acknowledgment and commendation of his unselfish bravery. Guernsey is a Methodist minister. He was at one time pastor of a New York church, and in present pasteur of the Newfield M. E. Church at Bridgeport.

FAT MEN IN BIG CONTEST.

"Old Boy Dell" and John
Christopher Neck and Neck.

As the last days of The Evening World's famous Fat Motormen's Contest approach interest seems to centre in Adelbert Dellegio, known as "Old Boy Dell," and John Christopher, of the Third Avenue line, for first honors.

Even the motormen themselves, before the official weights are announced and the decision rendered, believe that the race is between these two.

The following letter has been received with the request that it be printed: "Editor Fat Motormen Contest—Dear Sir: As the trainer and manager for 'Old Boy Dell,' and in his behalf, I wish to enter a protest against the horse car drivers being admitted in the Fat Motormen Contest. I do not see how it can be termed a Fat Motormen's Contest if drivers are permitted to compete. I would suggest that if any driver approaches the weight of the leading heavy motorman he be given a consolation prize. I feel that this would be satisfactory to every one.

We have incurred a heavy expense training our men, it costing us from $250 to $175 per day, so you can see we are in it for glory as well as for the money.

"Let me tell you that since I started in to train my men my work has increased two fold. I have had to travel to carry his current handles or even going ph. He won't even turn his legs or lift a finger. He is without doubt a 'baby elephant' and he has my heart broken. The way he waddles around, I feel that I am in this contest beat and sold, as are all the men to win."

"Old Boy Dell,"

"Manager 'Old Boy Dell,' Bridge 120." The post laureate of the Madison Avenue depot, in the person of Motormen A. E. Jackson, has composed and dedicated the following sonnet to "Old Boy Dell":

"OLD BOY DELL,"
Motormen Run No. 312,
Madison Avenue Division.
If you think you can beat him
It will take all your time.
He's the fastest man in the business,
And he makes no extra charge.
So all of you come and have a look at
"Old Boy Dell,"
He's all very fine and large."

It is urged that all delinquent contestants file their applications for entry at once. All motormen within a radius of twenty-five miles of City Hall Square are eligible. The Evening World makes but one stipulation in this great contest. Each competitor must be weighed in the presence of two reliable witnesses and the accuracy of the scales attested. Address all applications to "The Fat Motormen," Editor, P. O. box 2,557, New York City.

The Evening World offers three prizes, the first being a cash prize of $5 in gold to the fattest motorman, the second a prize of $5 in the next fattest motorman and the third a prize of $10 to the thinnest motorman.

SAY MARSHAL WAS INHUMAN.

Dietz Believes Wife's
Death Due to Cruel
Eviction.

Charges of needless cruelty that caused a woman's death have been preferred before the Mayor against City Marshal Praecht.

Lawyer Freedman, of 202 Broadway, declares that Mrs. Barbara Dietz, wife of William Dietz, died on Christmas day in the Flatbush Hospital. The family lived at 123 Debevoise street.

The landlord had instituted dispossession proceedings and Marshal Praecht, with two men, went to the house to turn the family and the stove away, also, when they arrived.

When they knocked she got out of bed and opened the door. As she did so the men, it is charged, pushed past her and proceeded to take the bed apart. In spite of the fact that Mrs. Dietz was in a very delicate condition, and had a doctor's affidavit to that effect. They took the stove away, also. While she lay on the bare floor she, two hours later, became a mother. Dr. Huss, of Sumner avenue, was called in and he found the woman in a precarious condition. She was removed to the Flatbush Hospital the next day. Before her removal she had become insane through suffering. In frenzy she had jumped from a
